

I agree with a previous commenter that Power Line Carrier users must not be required to reveal locations and frequencies used for PLC. For the security of the interconnected electric power transmission system, these data should not become public. Disruption of the power grid during a national emergency or terrorist attack by someone with that knowledge would be disastrous.